February 18-Mary Tudor.

One of the most frequently misudged queens of history, Mary Tudor -unfairly called "Bloody Mary"-was born 399 years ago, the daughter of Henry VIII of England and the first of his six wives, and it seems clear that she inherited much of that king's that she inherited much of that king's unusual abilities. It is said that when she was but four years old she was proficient in playing the virginals, he musical instrument then in vogue for young women, and when she was only nine years old she could write with the greatest ease in Latin. Later she learned Spanish, Italian and French. Although Henry VIII was exceedingly eager to secure her the best of in structors, her mother gave her her first lessons in Latin.

From the time that Mary was two years old, negotiations were constantly in progress for her marriage, but it was not until she was long past her youth that she was actually mar-ried to Philip of Spain, who was eleven years her juntor. One of the most admirable traits in

Mary's character was her loyalty and devotion to her husband, who little appreciated the treasure of the love appreciated the treasure of the love of so sincere a woman. The blot on her reign is the persecution of the Protestants which began about six months after her marriage to the Spanish king, and which lasted for three years. Modern historians do not count this persecution so much a fault. count this persecution so much a fault of the Queen or of the church to which she was devoted as a piece of Spanish cruelty. The fact remains however, that because of this persecu-tion, which she sanctioned, her death was hailed as a cause for national reolding, and her name has gone down to history as "Bloody Mary."
